

Butterfly Pavilion Introduces New Habitat Gardening Basics Workshop on Sunday May 21, 2023

Participants will learn how to create a pollinator friendly garden, while making a positive impact on their home, neighborhood, community, and environment

What: If you've always wanted to see more butterflies in your garden, have bigger harvests from your kitchen garden, or just make a positive difference for the planet, pollinator habitat gardening could be for you! Butterfly Pavilion is offering a new workshop developed and taught by its horticulture, pollinator habitat, and gardening experts to help participants learn about pollinator habitat gardening. Attendees will learn how to help protect pollinators and begin to develop the know-how needed to design, install, and maintain a pollinator-friendly garden!

Why: Pollinators are essential to our economy, environment, and agriculture. They are needed to sustain our ecosystems, but their populations are in decline. By learning how to create a pollinator-friendly garden, members of our community can help build habitats that support and sustain these important creatures while expressing their creativity through outdoor space.

Who: Adults, homeowners, beginner gardeners and hobbyists, who are interested in learning about pollinators, want to express their creativity through outdoor space, and have an interest in sustainability and conservation.

Dates: Sunday, May 21, 2023
10:00 a.m. - 11:30 a.m.

Cost: $30 for members, $40 for non-members (waived entrance fee for non-members)

Where: Butterfly Pavilion
6252 W. 104th Ave
Westminster, CO
